

Claude and Claudette's hands enter shot from bottom corners. They each reach for a taffy.

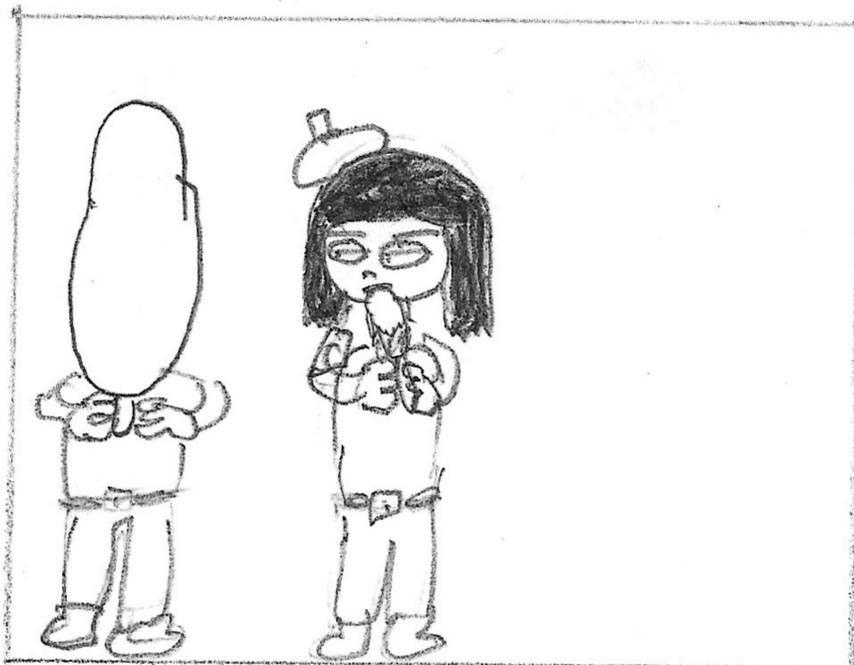

Claude and Claudette's hands pick up each taffy and clink the taffies together as a sort of toast.

Before Claudette's hand, on the left, can scoop up any snow, Claude's hand rapidly twirls up 75-80% of the snow in the tray.

Camera cuts to two shot of Claudette on the right, sighing, as she looks over at Claude's mammoth-sized taffy on snow. She is annoyed. It blocks Claude's head from view.

Claudette raises her taffy on snow into her mouth.

Shot transitions to Claude and Claudette sitting back at the table.